M GROOVE is an acid jazz piece for combo of trumpet, tenor sax, electric guitar, bass, and drums. Remembers the sounds of Mike Stern and the Brecker Brothers and should be played in a brazen, raucous manner.

This piece should be interpreted freely! That is, the solo sections may be extended (or contracted) as desired; the drummer is free to try another type of groove; the piano and guitar players may devise their own "comps"; or try it at a different tempo. M GROOVE was composed in 2015 for the music librarians at the University of Texas School of Music.

Joseph Hasper (b. 1963) is an emerging American composer best known for his jazz-influenced style of post-modern composition. His music is characterized by strong rhythmic impulses and harmonic structures borrowed from contemporary jazz idioms. Joseph has been an Assistant Professor at Cameron University and Adjunct Professor at the University of Oklahoma, and currently teaches at Shippensburg University. He was formerly staff arranger and pianist for Army bands in the US and overseas. He has been a freelance composer and arranger since 1998.
